

The tree outside my window
whispered green songs to me
all summer long,
dancing long-limbed in the sun.

Since you've been here
I have not paid it mind.

It has grieved its leaves away.